Her Love Revealed; or True to Her Colors.

"I shall never dare say a word to her now," said Robert Dale to his sister. "I should have offered myself before she had all the money left to her. How can I do it now?"

"Well, you were going to propose," said Florrie; "so I don't see why you should have such a foolish pride just because she has had a little money left to her."

Mabel Wynne was the village school-teacher and Robert Dale and she had been intimate friends for years. The sudden accession of riches, however, did not turn her head or cause her to desert her old friends. She began, however, to build an elegant house that was the talk of the town.

One day she stopped at the old Dale farm, and Robert Dale was in a flutter of excitement, which he could hardly conceal.

"I want you two to come up and see my new house to-morrow. The Glen is a very pretty place, you will find."

Mabel Wynne stayed and spent the evening at the Dale farm-house. She and Florrie sang sweet duets to the accompaniment of Robert's violin. They talked of old times and new. And when at last Robert returned from seeing Mabel home, Florrie, clasped her hands gleefully.

"Oh, Rob," she cried, "isn't it nice to have Mabel here once more?"

And Bob's smile did her heart good. The next day, however, things assumed a new aspect. Robert and Florrie walked up through the wood to the beautiful new house whose stained-glass casement commanded so rare a view of hillside, woodlands and distant winding river. Mabel was standing on the portico.

"Now come in," she cried, radiantly. "Walk through all the rooms with me. Here is the library—I want Robert's idea about fitting that up—and here are the drawing-rooms, Florrie and I must decide about those; for, to tell you the truth—and she colored pinker than the heart of a rose—"I am going to be married!"

Florrie started back with a little exclamation; Robert stood calm and quiet as one of the marble statue in the vestibule.

"Married!" Florrie cried; "and not to confide in me! Oh, May!"

"Tell me," said Mabel, "shall we furnish the drawing-rooms in blue and silver, or pink and gold? And my rooms shall be the south one, or the suite looking out over the river? And Bob must have the vestibule furnished to suit a man's taste. I shouldn't like to have my husband criticize them when he comes. Will you do this for me, Bob, because of our old friendship? Oh, don't look so solemnly at me! I know I am asking a great deal, but I thought I could depend on you."

"You can," he answered, quickly. "Come out and look at the sun-dial on the south lawn," added Mabel. "Florrie has run upstairs to see the river from the observatory. We wait for her, because, Bob, I want to tell you a secret."

"Would not your husband be the proper person to confide in, May?" he asked.

"In this case, no Bob!" she cried. "Listen to me. I love this man with all my soul—this husband that is to be—and he loves me."

"Naturally," observed Robert, setting his teeth.

"But he does not dare to tell me so. He thinks, don't you see, that I am an heiress. Well, so I am; but I am a woman, nevertheless, and I love him! Is my wretched money to part us? If so, I will fling it all into the ocean, and begin life anew as a beggar-girl. Now, Bob, what shall I do? It is for this that I have sent for you to come here. Answer me quickly!"

"Tell him all," said Robert huskily. "For God's sake, do not break his heart for so trifling a cause as this!"

Mabel's cheek's crimsoned, her eyes fell to the ground.

"I have told him," she murmured, "within this hour. 'Oh, Robert, Robert! I have said too much!'"

"My May, my own darling!" cried Dale. "And to think that this miserable false pride of mine failed to measure the nobility of your virtue!"

When Florrie came down from the observatory to the marble sun-dial, where the minutes were measured off by sunshine—ah, how appropriate it seems just now, this division of time—Bob and Mabel were sitting side by side on a rustic bench, and there was something in their faces that betrayed the truth at once.

"You have discovered our secret, little sister," said he.

Florrie uttered a cry of joy.

"Could it be anyone else than Bob?" Mabel whispered, her sweet eyes full of loving light.

And then Florrie, the mendacious little gypsy, declared that she had known it all along. It wasn't a bit of a surprise to her. Everybody had seen it but Bob; and Love was proverbially blind.

Curious Indian Superstitions.
The peasant Indians of Central America hold some curious superstitions, of which the following are examples:

When a child is ill the mother takes a drake, sings its tail feathers, and muttering certain words, passes it over the patient.

A woman feeds a parrot with a few pieces of tortilla and gives the child the crumbs which fall from the beak, as they will make it talk.

Colic is due to the evil eye; in order to get rid of the disturbing influence the woman breaks four duck's eggs into a basin, and, having mixed them with rue, places the whole under the child's bed; if the compound be curried in the morning the spirit has departed.

The Question Referred.
A musty old bachelor met a woman on a bad crossing the other day and she crowded him off into the mud. He writes, saying:

"Is it any reason because a man is a man that a woman should be a hog?"

We refuse to answer this ungallant questioner and refer him to the woman herself.—(Chicago Merchant Traveler.)

The Sawdust Question.

Soon the Legislature will be in session. One of the first matters that should receive the attention of that body is to devise ways and means of ridding the Truckee river of the sawdust nuisance. There is no doubt of the fact that the effect produced upon the water by dumping sawdust into the Truckee is one of the causes of the prevailing sickness, not only in Reno, but along its banks.

Two years ago the Legislature made a grand rally, and a committee appointed by the Senate and Assembly met a committee from the California Legislature, who saw the necessity of action and introduced a bill in the Senate to correct the evil. That bill failed to become a law.

Senator Foley has taken much interest in this matter, and recently in an interview stated that during his recent extended visit to San Francisco he had met a number of the California State Senators and discussed this matter with them, and in these conversations he had received the greatest encouragement that that State would act favorably in the matter should it be the wish of Nevada that she should do so.

The easiest and most practical way to rid ourselves of this source of disease, to say nothing about the fish interest, is for the Legislature among the first things that body does, to appoint a strong committee to visit Sacramento in a body and there present our claims for relief by appropriate legislation.

The ball was started rolling, practically, by the last Legislature, and if the work commenced by that body is followed up with zeal and discretion, the results cannot be otherwise than favorable.

The Bulletin, which has always had faith and friendship for Nevada, says Senator Stewart will endeavor during the session to obtain an additional appropriation for irrigation surveys. The $100,000 appropriated at the last session will only begin the work. The East is continually complaining that Nevada does not fill the proper measure of Statehood. This irrigation project is the first step toward the remedy of that complaint.

While it is probable that the Senate will pass the Allison Tariff bill after the Democrats tire themselves out in talking about it, there is no reasonable prospect that any bill will be sent to the President by the present Congress. The House will not accept the Senate substitute for the Mills bill.

A NUMBER of leading Republicans of East Tennessee have purchased and shipped to Washington a beautiful span of blooded horses, which are to be presented to Hon. M. S. Quay in recognition of his services to the party during the campaign.

More Race Troubles.

JACKSON, Tenn., Dec. 18.—A desperate fight occurred between the negroes and whites in a remote part of this county last Friday. It grew out of a law-suit, and a fight occurred in Court, where several persons were badly hurt. The negroes sent to this city on Sunday for ammunition. They are armed with shotguns, pistols and knives, and swear they will not be arrested. The officers went from here yesterday to arrest them, but the result is not known. Serious trouble is feared.

Some of the Particulars.

Meridian, Miss., Dec. 18.—A number of telegrams were received here yesterday morning, stating that a riot had occurred at Wahaloka, Kimber county, fifty miles south of Meridian, and that Holly Morton of this place was killed. Two parties, aggregating sixty men, were dispatched to the scene. They returned last night, reporting that everything had quieted down. They give the following account of the disturbance: On Thursday a son of G. F. Nicholson, a prominent farmer, was driving along the road, when he met a negro desperado driving in the opposite direction. Young Nicholson's vehicle by accident came in collision with that of the negro, who kept in the middle of the road as if determined to drive the boy out. The negro cursed the youth, when the father of Nicholson appeared and interfered. The negro drew a revolver and closed with Nicholson, knocking him senseless with his pistol, and then fled. The next day Nicholson told his friends of the negro's assault, and on Saturday it was determined to organize a posse and arrest the marauder. Information of this reached the negroes, and it is said that two white men gathered a party of negroes together at a church on Sunday night and organized a force of ten to resist any attempt to arrest Maury. These white men are known to the people of Wahaloka, but their names cannot be learned. It is the settled determination to lynch them when found.

The negro force went to Maury's house and concealed themselves in the smoke house and cotton houses. Soon after this the posse of white men came up the road and halted in front of Maury's house. Four of them walked up to the house and found it deserted. They then went to the smoke house, where they found three negroes. These men were questioned as to the whereabouts of Maury, but they pretended that they could not tell where he could be found. Then a man on the outside shouted, "Here is Maury! Surrender you and arrest him!"

The whites rushed in a body from the building, and as they emerged, were met with a volley from eight or ten muskets and shotguns. William Vaughn was seriously wounded by a bullet in the neck and shoulders, and another man whose name the whites will not reveal, received a slight wound in the hand. This volley came from the cotton house and was promptly returned by the whites, but the negroes, being behind stout plank walls, received no injury. The whites discovered that they were fighting at a great disadvantage and moved around to the north side of the structure. Here they received another volley, resulting in the instant death of Henry Maury and the wounding of his brother, J. F. Maury, near the elbow. The whites now drew off and the firing ceased temporarily.

Notwithstanding their losses, however, the posse determined to make another attack on the cotton house, approaching at this time from the south. As they drew up they received a third volley, the negroes apparently awaiting the order to fire, at which time done in the two previous instances. At this third volley Seth Cobb received twenty-two buckshot in the breast and stomach, tearing the entire front part of his body away, and John Dew, another of the whites, was probably mortally wounded by a pistol ball in the groin.

The whites again drew off for consultation, when it was decided that another attack with their reduced forces was useless, and they determined to wait for daylight and reinforcements. While they were consulting the negroes rushed from the cotton house to Maury's residence in a body and proceeded to fortify that building, and the white men went back to Wahaloka.

Yesterday morning another force of fifty men was raised, who proceeded to Maury's residence, but the place was found entirely deserted. The whites burned the buildings on the place, together with those on a farm adjoining. They scoured the woods for the negroes but could find no trace of them. It is impossible to find the negroes within five miles of the scene of trouble. The white people from the adjoining towns poured into Wahaloka all day and joined in the search, but as none of the negroes except Maury are known, they accomplished nothing. One negro was seen lurking in the woods and was fired upon by a party of whites, but he instantly disappeared. It is believed there will be more trouble, for it is certain that if any of the negroes who fired on the whites are caught they will be killed. The feeling, however, is now against the white men, who are said to have organized the negroes. Not a single negro is known to have received any injury. Two white men, besides those already reported, were wounded, but their names were not given. It does not appear that the whites were attempting to make the arrest under any legal authority, but as they are sustained by the entire white population of Keuper and the adjoining counties, it is unlikely that any proceedings will be taken against them.

There is no change in the situation at Wahaloka. The village is crowded with men from the surrounding country, and parties are searching the swamps and every locality where the negroes are supposed to be secreted, but up to 10 A. M. not one had been found, and it is supposed they have left the country. All the parties who left Meridian yesterday for the scene have returned, and report everything quiet.

Congressional Proceedings.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—House.—Springer stated that he would not call up the Territorial bills to-day, that there will be a meeting of the Committee on Territories to-morrow, and it would be then determined when these measures will be considered. The House went into a Committee of the Whole on the legislative appropriation bill.

A motion to increase the clerical force of the civil service commission gave rise to a spicy debate. Henderson of Iowa charged that the Administration was violating the spirit of the civil service law. The Commissioners were defended by McMillan of Tennessee and Cummings. Spinole of New York made a fierce onslaught upon the civil service law, and earnestly advocated an amendment, striking out all appropriations for its enforcement.

SENATE.
The resolution for evening sessions was taken up, and an amendment was offered by Morrill, providing the daily hour of meeting of the Senate to be 11 A. M., and at 5:30 a recess be taken until 8 P. M. West opposed the resolution. He understood its political importance. The Democratic Senators did not propose to make a factional opposition to the tariff bill, but it was cruel and outrageous to ask them to hold night sessions in order to rush it through. Morrill argued that evening sessions were necessary in order that the Senate might do the work before it, which included not only the tariff bill, but the appropriation bills, which would require time.

Vest warned the Republicans that the proposition to put the tariff bill through under whip and spur could not be carried out. Further debate followed, and finally the further consideration of the resolution for the evening session was unanimously postponed until to-morrow. A compromise is under consideration.

The popular opinion is that the bunch who, six weeks ago, robbed an express messenger on the New Orleans & Northern Railway, bossed the Duck Hill job. Governor Lowry yesterday offered a reward of $500 for the capture of the robbers and the Illinois Central offers $1,000.

The Condition at Panama.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—It is said at the Navy Department that a vessel will probably be sent to Colon to protect American interests in Panama, but the steps have not yet been taken in that direction. It is customary to station a vessel in that neighborhood during the winter season. There is nothing known of any trouble on the Isthmus.

Did Their Work Too Well.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 17.—At a meeting of the Tammany Democratic Society of this city this evening, an appropriation of $1,000 was made for the purpose of assisting in defraying the expenses of the general recount of votes in the late election of the city, and also for the punishment of fraud if any is detected.

A Flood at Panama.

PANAMA, Dec. 18.—Railroad communication with Colon is still interrupted by the effects of the storm. The river charges rose again on Saturday, but although still high, it is subsiding. The canal works were considerably damaged. Great anxiety prevails regarding the affairs of the canal.

A Mongolian Sensation.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 18.—One hundred Chinamen created a sensation by having a well dinner at the fashionable Hotel last night, at a cost of five dollars per plate.

No Holiday Recess.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—A Republican Senatorial caucus this morning decided that the Senate is to continue in session without a holiday recess, until the tariff bill shall be disposed of, letting the House take a recess if it so desires. It was also decided to hold two sessions daily, beginning at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M.

Trouble Feared.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—Owing to fears that the Panama Canal Company's difficulties may give rise to disorders on the Isthmus, the French Government has decided to send a man-of-war to Colon to protect French interests, and it is expected the United States will send two.

Hunting for Opium.

SANBACH, Mich., Dec. 18.—The Government agents have recovered forty pounds more of smuggled opium, there are still 500 pounds which the officers are searching for.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"EXTRA STAR" KEROSENE!

Best and Safest Oil Manufactured. Strictly Water White. Guaranteed 150° fire test.

TWO MUCH CANNOT BE TAKEN when purchasing Coal Oil, to obtain an article that will be perfectly safe and of good burning quality. The fact is now generally recognized that our "EXTRA STAR" and "EXTRA STAR" Oils are the safest and best illuminating oils ever offered, being superior in fire test and burning quality to all others. These oils are remarkably uniform, which is a decided advantage to the consumer. They will cost no more than inferior brands that are being put on the market branded "High Fire Test," but which are really only kerosene, rendering them very unsafe oils for family use. We guarantee the "EXTRA STAR" better in every respect than the Kerosene, and any of the fancy brands sold at higher prices. We have had great difficulty in obtaining a sufficient supply to meet the large and increasing demand for our brands. A full supply, however, has just arrived, and we are now in condition to fill orders promptly. Give these oils a trial and you will use no others. We quote "Star" Oil at 22c per gal. lots to suit; "Extra Star" at 27c per gal. lots to suit.

These oils can be obtained from our branch stores at Sacramento, Los Angeles, Oakland, San Diego, Cal., and Portland, Or. d&wim6

Newly Discovered Evidence.
Mrs. Clara Belle McDonald is fighting the decree of divorce granted her husband. The divorce was granted on the ground that she had occupied a room at a Los Angeles hotel with Seneca Swalm. It was sworn to by a clerk, that she had been registered under assumed names.
Mrs. McDonald now has evidence that on the night in question the room was occupied by the parties whose names were on the register, and that they were the genuine names of a man and wife who registered there. It is also shown that the McDonald detectives knew that the testimony in the case against the defendant was false.

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

A Musical Treat for To-morrow Evening Assured.
The 29th rehearsal of the Music Department of the School for Girls will take place at the school to-morrow evening. Friends and patrons of the school are especially invited to attend. The Music Department, under the direction of Miss Quaffie, during the twelve years of the school's existence, occupies the same high position which it has always held. Miss Quaffie is an enthusiastic devotee of the divine art, and she succeeds in imparting to her pupils a just proportion of her own enthusiasm. She and her assistant have had their time fully occupied during the term now closing, and from previous indications they will have their time and strength taxed to the utmost during the next term. The Easter term of the school begins January 10, 1889. Following is the programme for to-morrow evening:

SUDDEN DEATH.

Last week Rev. J. C. Ambrose, Pastor of the M. E. Church, A. D. Wilcox, J. M. Garrison and his stepson, W. H. Minor, and Charles Akin, left here, says the Silver State, on a hunting trip to the Jackson Creek Mountains. Last night Willie Minor arrived in town, bringing the sad and startling intelligence that Mr. Ambrose died Saturday night in camp. The gentleman was quite poorly, and had traveled a good deal Saturday. He ate some supper, complaining of feeling tired, and remarking that he would have a good rest next day, meaning Sunday, went to bed, and in a few minutes died in a peaceful slumber. His body was brought to Abel's wood camp yesterday, and will arrive here to-day.

Mr. Ambrose came here from Catalina, Michigan, about the 1st of October last, and assumed the pastorate of the M. E. Church. He was a man of much more than ordinary ability, and was esteemed and respected by all who knew him. He leaves three children, whose ages range from seven to eleven years, and an estimable wife, whose grief God alone can assuage.

A USEFUL HINT.

How a Fractious Horse Was Subdued.

A beautiful and high-spirited horse, says an exchange, would never allow a shoe to be put on his feet. When any one tried to shoe him he resisted all efforts, kicked aside everything but an anvil and came near killing himself against that. His owner was on the point of consigning him to the plough, where he might walk unshod, when an officer lately returned from Mexico, took a cord about the size of a common bed-cord, put it in the mouth of the horse like a tie, and tied it tightly on the animal's head, passing his left ear under the string, not painfully tight, but tight enough to keep the ear down and the cord in place. This done, he patted the horse gently on the side of the head, and commanded him to follow, and instantly he obeyed, perfectly subdued and as gentle and obedient as a dog, suffering his feet to be lifted without making resistance, and acting in all respects like an old stager.

A General Boom all Along the Line.

The Greenville (Cal.) Bulletin gives its section the following send off: Plumas leads the rest of the world; she has the prettiest women, the smartest boys, the fastest horses, the best gold mines, the finest soil and timber, the most beautiful scenery, the most practicable railroad passes, the best newspaper and job office (Advocate N. B.), and can raise more children to the square acre than any other part of the world. In fact, Plumas is a wonderful country, and the wonders never cease. She now takes the lead in stock-raising. Last week, at Crescent, a cow belonging to M. Frolich gave birth to triplets—all are living and are fine calves. Less than two years ago the same cow gave birth to twins. Five calves in two years! How's that for stock business.

FRUIT BY THE WHOLESALE.

A New York paper says: See how the fruits of the season are flowing in—yes, by the steamer cargo, for three of these vessels have just arrived with an aggregate of 13,000 boxes of oranges and lemons, 11,500 barrels of currants, 40,850 boxes of prunes, 6,225 bags of almonds and 4,477 barrels of grapes. In addition to the above is the California crop of raisins, of which 600,000 boxes have already been received and 250,000 more are expected. Such a supply as this ought to be sufficient for the season, but as much more will probably come before the close of the month.

Carson Guard Shooters.
Despite the disagreeable weather, says the Carson Tribune of the 17th instant, nineteen men participated in the shooting at the Carson Guard range yesterday, and notwithstanding the unsteady and shifting wind several good scores were made, as follows: First-class—Thaxter 40, Alley 44, McCullough 42, Saffell 41. Second-class—Gordon 42, Doyle 41, Bryant 41, Daugherty 40. Second scores—McCullough 45, Wilcox 44, Cowing 43, Daugherty 42, McBriarty 42, H. D. Thaxter 42, Thaxter 40. Thaxter shot a score left handed and made 42.

Slaughter House Burned.
From the Tribune it is learned that Otto Schultz's slaughter house at Carson was burned yesterday morning. Besides the loss of the building and an ice house just completed, a large quantity of hides and pelts were destroyed. Loss $3,000; insurance $1,000.

JUST SENTENCE.

In the United States Circuit Court at Dubuque, Iowa, recently, William Kraus and George Buxby, engineers, and Michael Garnett, fireman, of the steamer Lady Grace, were sentenced to six months each and a fine of $200 for weighting the safety valve.

CARD OF THANKS.

A TEN YEAR SENTENCE.

Robert Judge, the notorious counterfeiter, has been sentenced to ten years in the Minnesota Penitentiary. He is a member of the famous Johnson gang, eight of whom are now in prison.

TWELVE YEARS AGO TO-DAY.

Showing the Business Changes That Have Taken Place.

Twelve years ago to-day Manning & Duck occupied the store that W. O. H. Martin now has.

Jacob Graff was running the bakery. Barnett Bros. were in the dry goods business.

Patrick Kelisher was running the Saddle Rock Restaurant in the place where Lemery is now.

J. Prescott was in business here. S. F. Hoole was in the Lachman building in the drug business.

S. N. Davidson was in the jewelry business.

Grey & Isaacs were doing a thriving business in the dry goods line in the store now occupied by F. Levy & Bro.

J. C. Hagerman was in the grocery business in the Masonic building.

Ferguson & O'Hare were contracting.

D. A. Bender & Co. were doing a banking business opposite the Depot Hotel.

Beck & Co. were in the grocery business in the Chase corner.

John S. Bowker was Justice of the Peace.

Wm. Stophrer kept the Ocean Spray Saloon on the corner where McKisick's Opera House is now.

Laycock & Lucas were sign painters. The Board of Trade held a meeting to discuss the question as to whether Reno should be incorporated or not.

WHY WOMEN EXCEL.

Their Bones and Flesh More Buoyant.

An Eastern exchange says: Their precious bones are lighter and their flesh more buoyant. The records of the humane societies on both sides of the Atlantic show that of late years a fair proportion of their medals fall to the lot of girls. There were several notable instances of rescue from drowning last Summer by girls under 20 years of age. Many women are accomplished swimmers. This is but natural. As their bones are generally lighter than those of men, and their flesh more buoyant, they have less difficulty to overcome in acquiring the art. Some of them could float at their first attempt if they could acquire the requisite faith in the power of the water to hold them up. Swimming is very much an act of faith, for it is generally the case that when a person believes sufficiently in the buoyancy of the water to trust to it his precious body, he is a swimmer. There were young girls at Newport last Summer who could float on the surface of the water with no more difficulty than they experienced in lying upon a sofa. They could have floated for hours if necessary. Some of the most famous swimming feats have been accomplished by very young women.

A USEFUL HINT.

How a Fractious Horse Was Subdued.

A beautiful and high-spirited horse, says an exchange, would never allow a shoe to be put on his feet. When any one tried to shoe him he resisted all efforts, kicked aside everything but an anvil and came near killing himself against that. His owner was on the point of consigning him to the plough, where he might walk unshod, when an officer lately returned from Mexico, took a cord about the size of a common bed-cord, put it in the mouth of the horse like a tie, and tied it tightly on the animal's head, passing his left ear under the string, not painfully tight, but tight enough to keep the ear down and the cord in place. This done, he patted the horse gently on the side of the head, and commanded him to follow, and instantly he obeyed, perfectly subdued and as gentle and obedient as a dog, suffering his feet to be lifted without making resistance, and acting in all respects like an old stager.

Make no Mistake.
By dispelling the symptoms so often mistaken for consumption, Santa Able has brought gladness to many a household. By its prompt use for breaking up the cold that too often develops into the fatal disease, thousands can be saved from an untimely grave. You make no mistake by keeping a bottle of this pleasant remedy in your house. California Cat-It-Cure is equally effective in eradicating all traces of nasal catarrh. Both of these wonderful California remedies are sold and warranted by Osburn & Shoemaker at $1 a package; three for $2.50.

Benefits of the Murchison Letter.
The Murchison letter has brought Pomona into prominence, and it is now reaping a profit from its wide advertising. Orders are coming into Pomona rapidly from New York, Philadelphia and Boston for wines from Pomona Valley, and Saturday a cablegram was received from London, England, ordering immediately the shipment by the Pomona Wine Company of 200 barrels of sherry and 70 barrels of brandy. The same quantity is also ordered to be shipped to London next February.

The Masquerade.
The Knights of Pythias have about completed their arrangements for the grand masquerade ball on the evening of January 1, 1889. The several elegant and valuable prizes will be on exhibition in the windows of S. J. Hodgkinson and Isaac Fredrick. The invitations have been mailed, and every effort will be made to make it a perfect success.

Put Up Job.
There is a strong belief that Bauer-isen, on trial for using dynamite to wreck Burlington trains, was led into the plot by detectives for the purpose of making a case against the strikers.

Gentlemen frequently complain of their barber shaving them too close, and the face and neck breaking out into small pimples. If Dardar's specific is applied to the face immediately after shaving, no matter how close the shave, all soreness will be prevented. Sold by William Fininger.

Ventura Cal, boasts of a 19-pound potato.

Can you imagine any ailment that will make a good natured person so peevish, dissatisfied, ill-tempered and cranky as biliousness? There is no reason, whatever, why any one should suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, Torpid Liver and loss of appetite, when Dr. Hentley's Dandelion Tonic, which everyone knows is a certain cure, and is so easily obtained. Sold by William Fininger.

THE CENTURY

MAGAZINE IN 1889.

WHY Has it such an enormous circula- tion? Experts estimate that between two and three millions of people read each number.

BECAUSE The CENTURY is above every thing a leader. It led the development of modern literature in America, and it has fostered American authors. It is alive to the issues of to-day. What it prints sets people to thinking and talking.

BECAUSE Whatever other periodicals the great reading world has found out that "no household can keep abreast of the times without The CENTURY." Its success is ex- plained by its contents.

BECAUSE The greatest writers of the world like to have their work read by the greatest readers, and therefore to such a magazine as THE CENTURY the best naturally comes. It was for THE CENTURY that General Grant wrote his reminis- cences of important battles.

BECAUSE It is publishing the life of Abraham Lincoln, by his private secretaries. Of this it has been said, "The young man who reads it is making himself of that which he will hunger for." The coming year presents the most important part of this great history, which may begin at any time.

BECAUSE It is printing those remark- able articles on "Siberia and the Exile System," by George Kennan, which are attracting universal attention and are being reprinted in hundreds of foreign news- papers, but are not allowed to enter Russia. The "Chicago Tribune" says that "no other magazine articles printed in the English lan- guage just now touch upon a subject which so vitally interests all thoughtful people in Europe and America and Asia." They are "as judicious as the opinions of a Supreme Court tribunal—at thrilling as the most sensational drama."

BECAUSE During 1889 THE CENTURY is to have a series of engravings of the greatest pictures of the Italian masters, made by Timothy Cole, the leading wood-engraver in the world, who has spent four years in Italy on this work; a series of "Strange True Stories of Louisiana," by Geo. W. Cable; occasional richly illustrated papers describing the scenes of the current International Sunday-school lessons; interesting illustrated papers on Ireland, and a series of humorous and pathetic fresh-American stories; a striking illustrated novelette, "The Romance of Dollars," by a new writer, and other novel- ettes to be announced later; supplemental war papers, technical and descriptive of special incidents. "Pictures of the Far West," by Mary Halleck Foote, etc., etc. We have not space here to announce all the new features. Let us send you (free) our "Catalogue of Special Publications," with original illustrations, containing full prospectus, special offer of back numbers to the beginning of the Siberian pa- pers, etc. The November number, which be- gins the new volume, is for sale everywhere after November 1st. This Catalogue costs 25 cents a number; $4.00 a year. Address THE CENTURY CO., 23 East 17th Street, New York.

TRIED BY FIRE.

"Marry Mr. Dymart? That old man? Mar- rama, you are jesting!" She stood at the open window of the shaly little sitting-room—a tall, straight young figure in a clinging black gown. A girl with a fair, sweet face, brown eyes, and golden hair—Lucia Denelle. At the other window—both of which opened upon great, straggling, unkempt grounds—a delicate-looking woman was bending over a huge basket of darning. All sorts and conditions of garments, all of a diminutive size, bespoke the oc- cupation of the weary, toil-worn mother of small children.

Mrs. Denelle glanced up, with a pair of tiny, dilapidated socks in her hand, and her tired face grew more careworn, and she suppressed a weary sigh. "Daughter, the very thought of your being forced into a loveless marriage breaks my heart. If you do not—can- not—learn to care for Mr. Dymart"— Lucia shrugged her graceful shoulders disdainfully—"then I will say no more. But he is good and kind. He offers to settle a handsome income upon me, so that the children can be properly edu- cated. He offers to lift the mortgage from this place, and secure it to me free of all incumbrance; also to refurnish the house with beautiful things. Really, my dear, Woodlawn would be a lovely place, with some necessary improve- ments, and with means sufficient to keep the grounds in order. And when I reflect upon our forlorn condition since your poor father's death, and glance about me at the six little ones— all younger than you, to be fed and clothed and educated upon the mere pittance which is left me from your father's life insurance—it makes my heart stand still. And Mr. Dymart loves you. His elegant home is near enough, so that I would not have to lose you al- together. Oh, Lucia, darling, I would never consent for you to go far away."

"Not even to Italy, mamma?"

The girl's sweet face had grown tender and gentle. She came to her mother's side, and drew the unfinished mending from her hands.

"There! Let me do it, mamma. Truly I am not tired. I've only given a music lesson this morning. Now, mamma—with a mischievous smile, which did not conceal the undercurrent of anxiety in her heart—"answer me! Mayn't I go to Italy as Stuart Harland's wife?"

"Good heavens!"

Mrs. Denelle started to her feet, pale and trembling like a leaf.

"Stuart Harland! A poor artist. Oh, Lucia, this is madness!"

"Mamma, I love him!"

"Madness—madness!" repeated the mother brokenly. "Lucia, I would rather see you dead, you are poor enough now."

"Mamma"—the girl's face was grave and resolute—"I cannot endure the thought of giving you pain, but I do not love Mark Dymart, and I have given my whole heart to Stuart Harland, and can never marry any one else."

Mrs. Denelle was wringing her hands in bitter sorrow. Neither of them ob- served the tall, dark figure in the over- grown gown without, lying at full length upon the garden seat, his hat drawn over his eyes.

A man of middle age, with dark- brown hair and beard just touched with gray, keen gray eyes, and severe ex- pression. The two women went on with the discussion, and never dreamed of the listener without.

"I would not willingly grieve or cross you, Lucia," Mrs. Denelle was saying sadly, "but I shall never give my con- sent."

"Then"—rebelliously—"we shall either have to marry without it, or— forgive me, mamma—with a little cry of pain at sight of her mother's distress—"No, I would never do that. But I would be doomed to a life of loneliness and unhappiness; and I know that that would make you unhappy, too."

Mrs. Denelle made no reply, and Lucia went on with the story before her. All day long she worked; cooking, iron- ing, and mending for the noisy, mis- chievous six, filled the time of overflow- ing. But Lucia, pale and patient, worked away, and nothing was left undone.

When the sun had set and twilight had fallen over the green earth like a benediction, when the last westering star tucked away in his little bed, then Lucia was at liberty. She threw a fleecy white wrap about her shoulders, and went out into the dusky grounds.

A little later Stuart Harland joined her. Tall and graceful was the young artist, with clear-cut features, large, luminous dark eyes, and a dark mustache; a face to attract any woman. And Lucia knew how good and true he was, and her whole heart was in the keeping of this man, whose only fault was poverty.

In golden silence the two paced on together down the tangled garden path. At last Stuart Harland turned, and his dark eyes met Lucia's with a silent question in their depths. She shook her golden head slowly, sadly.

"It is useless, sweetheart," she said softly. "I have spoken to mother. I wished to prepare her for your intended interview to-morrow; but, Stuart, it is quite useless—quite. She will never consent to our marriage; and—I can't blame her, poor little mother! It would be separation for us both, perhaps for- ever. Oh, Stuart, Stuart!"—the golden head went down upon his shoulder, and the sweet voice broke into sobs and tears—"I cannot give you up!"

"And you shall not," he murmured tenderly. "We will wait, dear love."

"I shall be old and grey and ugly," she was beginning.

But he stooped and kissed the sweet red lips.

"You may be as old as Methuselah, and grey as a badger—ugly you never can be under any circumstances, little woman!—but you shall be my wife just the same. I will never give you up."

And so their troth was pledged anew; and Stuart Harland went home through the silvery moonlight with a tender smile upon his lips, and his dark eyes shining with a happy light.

"I wonder who this fellow can be of whom Lucia told me to-night," he queried, as he walked along. "It is a new arrival here, who has purchased Beechwood—grand old place—and Lucia says she met him last summer while she was away in the West teaching school. A rich western merchant; and—by Jove! who is that?"

A tall, dark form loomed up before him in the moonlight; an elderly man, at sight of whom Stuart involuntarily halted.

"Mr. Harland, is it not?" began the stranger, quickly. "I would like a few words with you, sir, if you please."

Stuart bowed.

"Dymart. My name is Mark Dymart. Stuart Harland, did you ever hear that name before?"

"Never," to his knowledge, until to- night," the young man returned quietly. "Can I serve you in any way, Mr. Dymart?"

"Yes. I love Miss Lucia Denelle. If you were out of the way she might learn to care for me; and I am sure that once my wife she would love me, for I would be so kind and tender to her that I could not fail to win her in time. Mr. Stuart Harland, I under- stand that you are a struggling young artist, poor and proud. Oh, you need not get angry, I did not mean any in- sult; I was speaking for your good. I will make you this proposition; I agree to pay all your expenses to Italy, where you can perfect yourself in your art. I will make your name famous; for, no matter how fine an artist you may be, the world will never believe it until some rich and influential man says so. I will do all this for you; I will make you the richest and most famous artist of the day upon one condition."

"And that?"

Stuart Harland's voice was trem- bling. "Is—that you resign all pretensions to Lucia Denelle's hand! That you go away and leave the coast clear. What do you say?"

Trembling like a leaf, pale as marble, his great dark eyes blazing with indig- nation, Stuart turned with uplifted hand.

"Only your grey hairs deter me from chastising you as you deserve!"—he ground the words forth between his set teeth. "Out of my path, Mark Dymart, or I shall forget myself, and strike you dead at my feet!"

"Softly, softly, young man!" cried the other, lightly. "I meant no harm. I was appealing to your worldly wis- dom, but I see—Young man, give me your hand! I have applied a severe test, and I find I was right in my belief. Come home with me, Stuart Harland. I have a story to tell you."

Two days afterward Mrs. Denelle saw upon Lucia's white forefinger a magnifi- cent diamond ring.

The red blood rushed to the widow's pale cheeks in a sudden flood.

"Was Lucia going to be sensible, after all?"

"My dear"—a dubious glance at the ring—"I think you ought not to con- ceal anything from your own mother! Is it all settled, Lucia?"

"Yes, mamma—all settled; and I am the very happiest girl alive."

And the white arms went around Mrs. Denelle's neck, and Lucia's lips were pressed against her mother's.

"Mamma, it is all so strange! I can scarcely believe it even yet! But"— she stopped short, blushing prettily—"they are coming!"

"They" proved to be Stuart Harland and Mr. Dymart.

Mrs. Denelle looked profoundly sur- prised as the two men, arm-in-arm, entered the cool, airy room where she sat.

"My dear Mrs. Denelle," began Mark Dymart, at once, "I have wonderful news to tell you! This young man here, Mr. Stuart Harland, is my dead sister's only child, and, being next of kin, he will be heir to my posses- sions."

Mrs. Denelle was wringing her hands in bitter sorrow. Neither of them ob- served the tall, dark figure in the over- grown gown without, lying at full length upon the garden seat, his hat drawn over his eyes.

A man of middle age, with dark- brown hair and beard just touched with gray, keen gray eyes, and severe ex- pression. The two women went on with the discussion, and never dreamed of the listener without.

"I would not willingly grieve or cross you, Lucia," Mrs. Denelle was saying sadly, "but I shall never give my con- sent."

"Then"—rebelliously—"we shall either have to marry without it, or— forgive me, mamma—with a little cry of pain at sight of her mother's distress—"No, I would never do that. But I would be doomed to a life of loneliness and unhappiness; and I know that that would make you unhappy, too."

Mrs. Denelle made no reply, and Lucia went on with the story before her. All day long she worked; cooking, iron- ing, and mending for the noisy, mis- chievous six, filled the time of overflow- ing. But Lucia, pale and patient, worked away, and nothing was left undone.

When the sun had set and twilight had fallen over the green earth like a benediction, when the last westering star tucked away in his little bed, then Lucia was at liberty. She threw a fleecy white wrap about her shoulders, and went out into the dusky grounds.

A little later Stuart Harland joined her. Tall and graceful was the young artist, with clear-cut features, large, luminous dark eyes, and a dark mustache; a face to attract any woman. And Lucia knew how good and true he was, and her whole heart was in the keeping of this man, whose only fault was poverty.

In golden silence the two paced on together down the tangled garden path. At last Stuart Harland turned, and his dark eyes met Lucia's with a silent question in their depths. She shook her golden head slowly, sadly.

"It is useless, sweetheart," she said softly. "I have spoken to mother. I wished to prepare her for your intended interview to-morrow; but, Stuart, it is quite useless—quite. She will never consent to our marriage; and—I can't blame her, poor little mother! It would be separation for us both, perhaps for- ever. Oh, Stuart, Stuart!"—the golden head went down upon his shoulder, and the sweet voice broke into sobs and tears—"I cannot give you up!"

"And you shall not," he murmured tenderly. "We will wait, dear love."

"I shall be old and grey and ugly," she was beginning.

But he stooped and kissed the sweet red lips.

"You may be as old as Methuselah, and grey as a badger—ugly you never can be under any circumstances, little woman!—but you shall be my wife just the same. I will never give you up."

And so their troth was pledged anew; and Stuart Harland went home through the silvery moonlight with a tender smile upon his lips, and his dark eyes shining with a happy light.

"I wonder who this fellow can be of whom Lucia told me to-night," he queried, as he walked along. "It is a new arrival here, who has purchased Beechwood—grand old place—and Lucia says she met him last summer while she was away in the West teaching school. A rich western merchant; and—by Jove! who is that?"

A tall, dark form loomed up before him in the moonlight; an elderly man, at sight of whom Stuart involuntarily halted.

"Mr. Harland, is it not?" began the stranger, quickly. "I would like a few words with you, sir, if you please."

Stuart bowed.

"Dymart. My name is Mark Dymart. Stuart Harland, did you ever hear that name before?"

"Never," to his knowledge, until to- night," the young man returned quietly. "Can I serve you in any way, Mr. Dymart?"

"Yes. I love Miss Lucia Denelle. If you were out of the way she might learn to care for me; and I am sure that once my wife she would love me, for I would be so kind and tender to her that I could not fail to win her in time. Mr. Stuart Harland, I under- stand that you are a struggling young artist, poor and proud. Oh, you need not get angry, I did not mean any in- sult; I was speaking for your good. I will make you this proposition; I agree to pay all your expenses to Italy, where you can perfect yourself in your art. I will make your name famous; for, no matter how fine an artist you may be, the world will never believe it until some rich and influential man says so. I will do all this for you; I will make you the richest and most famous artist of the day upon one condition."

"And that?"

Stuart Harland's voice was trem- bling. "Is—that you resign all pretensions to Lucia Denelle's hand! That you go away and leave the coast clear. What do you say?"

Trembling like a leaf, pale as marble, his great dark eyes blazing with indig- nation, Stuart turned with uplifted hand.

"Only your grey hairs deter me from chastising you as you deserve!"—he ground the words forth between his set teeth. "Out of my path, Mark Dymart, or I shall forget myself, and strike you dead at my feet!"

"Softly, softly, young man!" cried the other, lightly. "I meant no harm. I was appealing to your worldly wis- dom, but I see—Young man, give me your hand! I have applied a severe test, and I find I was right in my belief. Come home with me, Stuart Harland. I have a story to tell you."

Two days afterward Mrs. Denelle saw upon Lucia's white forefinger a magnifi- cent diamond ring.
